
>> EXACT4EU

The project EXACT analyses, further develops and disseminates the tangible and intangible results of a number of EU projects falling into the two clusters Learning for life and Learning for a job.

>> Learning for the job: 2 examples of good practice

A specific part of the EXACT project concentrates on methods and tools to foster employability. Here we also can elaborate excellent methods and tools based on the outcomes of previous European projects – two of them are presented here:

>> EGUIDYA – Development of a European Career Guidance and Transnational Work-Related Exchange Programme for Disadvantaged Young Adults

“Eguidya” is a product that allows many tools for direct training such as videos, virtual learning games for foreign languages, history, economy, science and a lot more through the website www.eguidya.eu. The test, which took place in Palermo, Italy, allowed youngsters who are experiencing European volunteering, to discover these links and use them within a group.

It is a valid container of activities which can be accessible and usable for young people who are experiencing life abroad.

>> YES – Youth Employment Support

Especially for small and medium size enterprises (SME) insertion of young people is often a big challenge. Many young applicants are early school leavers and failed to complete vocational education and training – often they come from a disadvantaged background. YES responds to the clear need to strengthen staff managers' skills to interact with youth who will make up a considerable proportion of the future skilled work force. In the YES Training pack, which is designed for recruiters, HR-managers or working instructors in small companies, provides 5 blended learning modules to develop specific knowledge and competencies to cope with young trainees/employees. www.youth-employment-support.eu

>> EXACT – Project meeting in Norrköping – project consortium setting the course for the centre of excellence

The aim of establishing a European Centre of Excellence for teachers and trainers in second chance education gets more and more concrete. During the last project meeting in Norrköping (SE) the project consortium discussed the planning steps to set up this centre, how to establish and how to administrate it. The centre will be located at Arcus College (NL), the activities of the centre will be supported by external and mobile teams of experts, working in direct contact with teachers and trainers on regional /national level.
