Project RADIX – Putting Down the Vocational Roots

Vocational Dictionary in Eleven Languages

Newsletter

The Project

The project aims to facilitate the social-economic integration of migrant and refugees and those who are disadvantaged in the labour market because they have either poor language skills or they are unable to match their current skills with jobs available in their location. In particular, RADIX project aims to enhance work and educational opportunities for migrants, refugees and NEETS creating an international online compendium and dictionary for migrants, refugees and organisations who support them.

In Action

- Development of core and specialist vocabularies in 11 languages.;
- Creation of a web platform and web-based mobile app capable of providing relevant words and phrases

Resources

- A vocabulary and a set of core sentences translated into 11 languages and with 5 chosen employment sectors covered;
- A web-based mobile app to access the language;

Impact

- Enhanced access to further educational and job-seeking opportunities for migrants, refugees and NEETS;
- Improved entry into the labour market for not only migrants and refugees, but also NEETS and other unprivileged groups;
- Increased awareness of the challenges and needs related to language learning and access to the job market for those disadvantaged groups.

What's next

- The organisation of multiplier events to disseminate the materials to 80 'key' agency ,volunteer staff, migrants and refugees.
